ENDYMION.

How slowly falls you sickle from on high Through evening's silent sky, Flashing a splendor from its curved blade On the low-lying shade!

Now in and out the narrow cloud that bars Its pathway from the stars It slips, and with a golden glory shines, Nearing the mountain lines.

Nay, 'tis no sickle which some unseen hand Lets fall upon the land; It is the jewel of a lady's crown, As she steps lightly down.

Night after night, down the aerial stair She stealeth unaware; Leaving the empire which she ruleth above, And all her state, for love.

Behold, her feet have touched the rocky Where the young shepherd sleeps, And larger burns her jewel as she moves

In search of him she loves. And now it fades, and glimmers, and is gone. Happy Endymion! While here the world in sudden shadow lies, She bends above his eyes. -Atlantic Monthly.

Care of a Tramp's Hands. "One of the essential points of success in my profession," said a dilapidated old tramp who was talking to a reporter from behind the bars of one of the cells in the city jail this morning, "is to keep the hands in good order. You don't understand what I mean, eh? What I mean by keeping the hands in good order is this: Of course, in tramping from town to town, a man is liable to be arrested for vagrancy at any time. He must tell a story of how he has just been thrown out of work and is looking for employment, which, as yet, he has not been able to find. The Type of the first will ack him to how up his hands, and when he does produce them they must be horny and toilworn. Catch on, do you? "So you see it is part of my business to keep my hands looking as though they belonged to a man who was accustomed to work 365 days in the year. For that purpose I carry with me this small piece of hickory wood, which is round and very smooth. About twice a day I take it between my palms and rub them so that the friction will make them hard and callous. In that way, you see, I produce the 'real result' with very little trouble and annovance. There is a bottle of brown liquid which I use occasionally for staining the back part of my hands a beautiful sunbrown color, and there you are. When I show up my hands and tell the judge that I am a hard working man, thrown out of employment by the strikes, what can he do but believe me? The trick has saved me many a day in jail, and I flatter myself is a strictly original idea, though it is spreading rapidly. The profession, you see, is beginning to realize that it will never do to show up to a hard-hearted police judge a pair of tender, lily-white hands."-

In Favor of the Darwin Theory. ♦ Washington street orthopedic artist, speaking with me to-day about trusses and hernia, told me of a queer suggestion made to him a few days ago by a prominent Chicago Unitarian minister who called on him to see about a truss for another person. In the course of the conversation the fact had been commented upon that hernia was not, properly speaking, a rupture at all. Whenever there is a weakness in the muscles of the lower abdomen, and an interstice occurs, even three-quarters of an inch in diameter, the peritoneum, or sack which contains the intestines, forces its way through the orifice, and, little by little the intestines fellow, making an outside bunch.

Ohama Bee.

When this was explained to the divine, who was, of course, an ardent disciple of Darwin, his eyes became fixed on the floor for a few moments in deep thought, and then, his countenance lighting up with the joy of a new discovery, he said to the fruss man: "By the way, has it never occurred to you that this weakness in the muscles of the abdomen, which exists in one out of every seven men that walk the earth, resulted from the human family straightening up and becoming bipeds instead of quadrupeds? It seems to me that we have a great argument here for the descent of man from the lower animals." The truss man says it may be so for all he knows, Horses, dogs, cats, and even canary birds are often ruptured, but in their case it can always be traced to accident and mechanical force, not to congenital weakness.-Chicago Jour-

Of Pill and Ointment Celebrity. Whether the late Mr. Holloway, of pill and ointment celebrity, did good in his lifetime with his pills and ointment may be disputed by doctors and patients; but there can be no question about his doing good after his death. He left a handsome sum of money to found an asylum for better class lunatics, as you may know, and besides that, being much impressed with the necessity of a higher education for women, left $3,500,000 to build and endow a grand college for 450 girls of the upper milidle class. The building is said to cover more ground than any college in the world. Every girl will have a bedroom and a study to her self. Lovely grounds, laid out in terraces and tennis lawns, surround the building, and many of the gentlemen who went down the other day to a private view of the place, previous to the opening of it by the queen, would not have objected to be turned into girl students just for a few years, and peacefully study and live in a place so well worth living in. Her majesty commanded that the college at once, instead of after the opening ceremeuv, as is usual. Seldom indeed did an establishment better deserve the vitle -Max O'Rell's Landon Letter.
